Born in Budapest to a wealthy family, Samuel remembers as a five-year-old in 1938 the anti-Semitic laws that were passed in Hungary.

He talks about his father's travels and relocation, first to New York and then to Mexico City in June of 1940 where the family—Samuel, his mother, and sister—followed in 1941. And he readily shares the experiences in Mexico from the blending of cultures to the anti-Semitism he encountered.

You might wonder about the origins of his hyphenated last name or the fate of his extended family. Join us and learn.
